Killarney Provincial Park Lake and Portage Descriptions

SANDY LAKE, Killarney Provincial Park

PORTAGE FROM SANDY LAKE TO NORWAY LAKE

Sections of this portage are narrow and can become overgrown or wet depending on the season. The trail leads around the left hand side of a marsh and depending on water levels this small lake can be paddled to continue the portage. Arriving at Partridge Lake, paddle less than a kilometre to reach a 25m portage (many paddlers would just call this a lift over) will take you into Norway Lake.

SANDY LAKE

Picturesque Sandy Lake is the perfect destination if seeking peace and solitude. This secluded location is surrounded by the La Cloche Mountains and offers breathtaking views of Silver Peak. Among the more adventurous visitors, this is often taken as a challenge to bushwhack up to its summit. Those happy to stick close to its waters can simply soak up the splendor of the rugged red pines surrounding this small lake. With only one campsite on the lake, it is unlikely to see any other visitors while staying on Sandy. This campsite (#10) is surrounded by red pines and has ample room for 2-3 tents.

If you are staying on Sandy and want to do a bit of exploring, there are several small lakes that can be easily accessed from Sandy. Amikogaming Lake, Wiskeyjack Lake, and Hemlock Lake are among the larger and more interesting lakes in the area.

Those interested in doing some fishing will be pleased to find stocks of smallmouth bass, largemouth bass and northern pike here. Please keep in mind that fishing Lake Trout is prohibited for all seasons due to fish sanctuary regulations in the Park.
